Coaches tell you in their own words

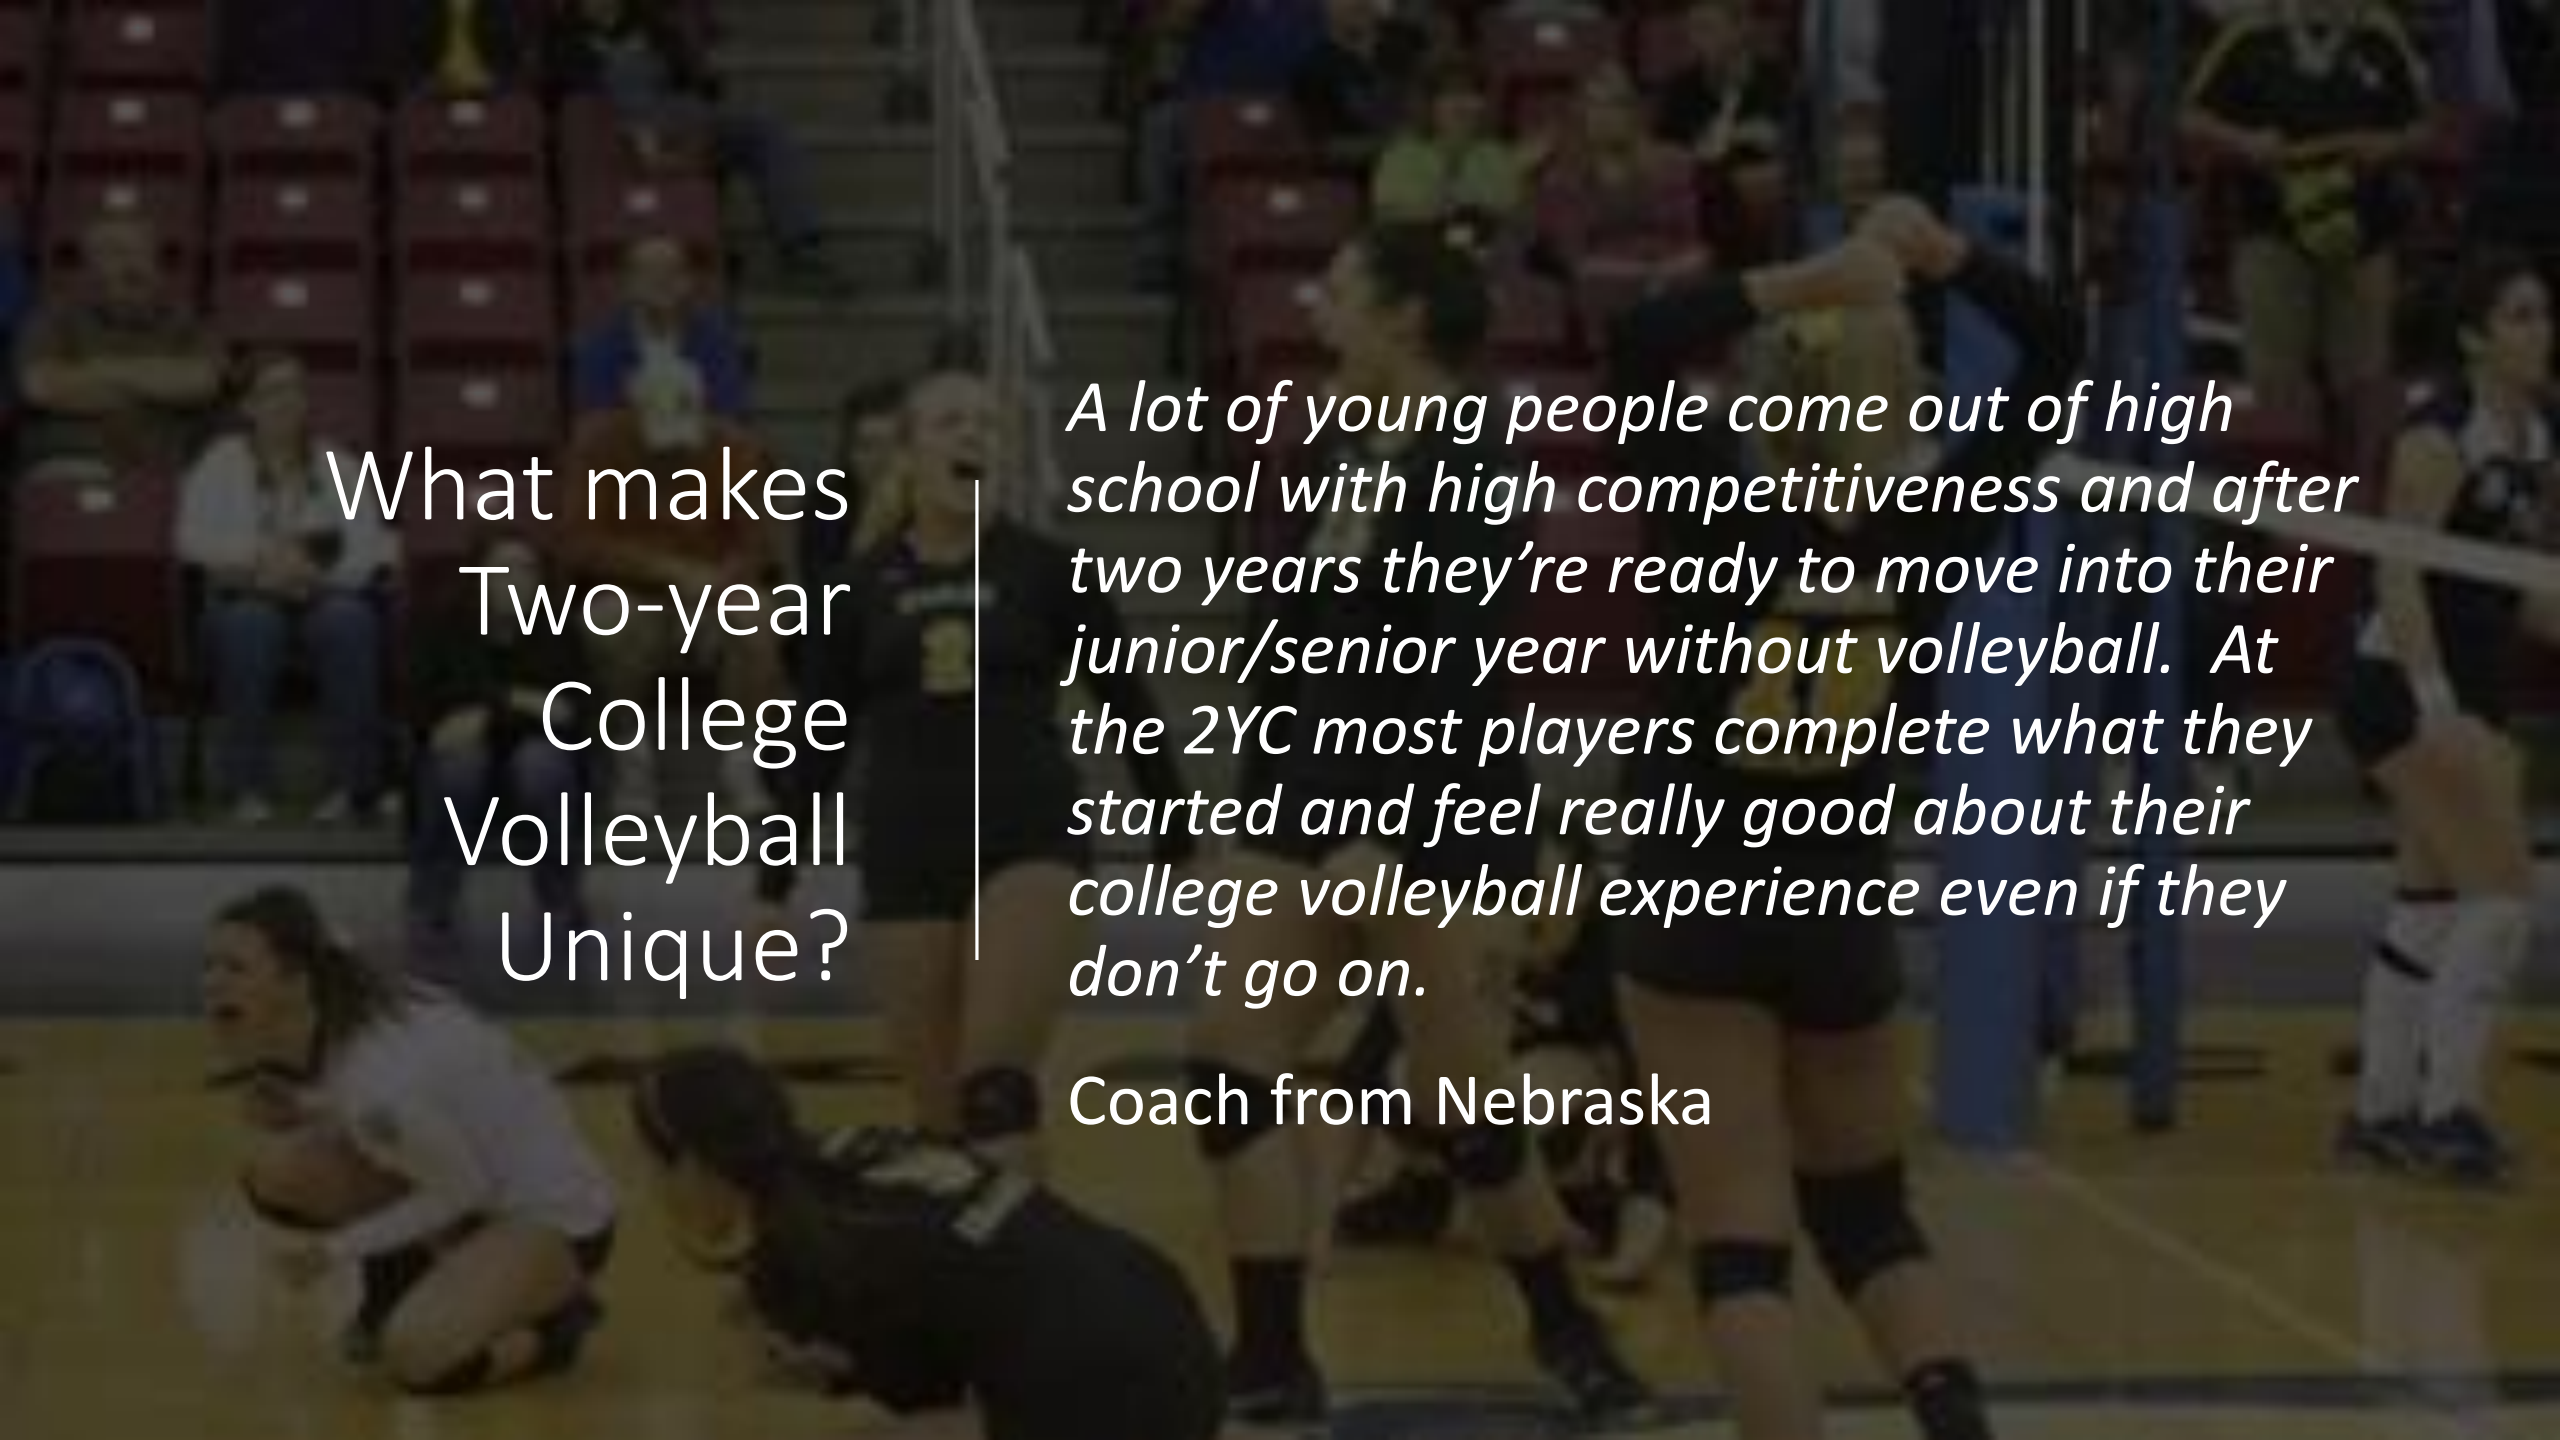

What makes Two-year College Volleyball Unique?

The best part of my job is being able to recruit a student/athlete who may not have received the offers they wanted out of high school, develop them and then make their dreams a reality after two years. We need them to play so they get more one on one attention as a freshman.

What makes
Two-year
College
Volleyball
Unique?

A lot of young people come out of high school with high competitiveness and after two years they're ready to move into their junior/senior year without volleyball. At the 2YC most players complete what they started and feel really good about their college volleyball experience even if they don't go on.

You can commit to that 'big name' out of high school and sit and wait for your shot...or you can come here and get a 'bigger name' because you have played 100 matches while others are waiting their turn.

What makes Two-year College Volleyball Unique?

The first two years of college are a huge transition period so the 2YC offers a great environment to explore careers, take general education courses, get an associate degree, and grow and mature as a student-athlete.

What makes Two-year College Volleyball Unique?

Two-year colleges students are receiving the same education – if not better – than students at the four-year level. We have professors that teach here as well as at major colleges and, in most cases, our class sizes are smaller.

What makes Two-year College Volleyball Unique?

Two-year colleges are less expensive so save you money, a good decision if you are undecided on a major. Besides, most of time they are also closer to home so family and friends can watch you play.

What makes Two-year College Volleyball Unique?

Many athletes sell themselves short by accepting a partial or walk-on spot at a 4-year with no shot at playing time their first two years. If they gave themselves another year or two to develop at a two-year college, they would have a lot more options.
